

LA FOLLETTE MAKES SPEECH IN SENATE

TALKS ON GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP OF PUBLIC UTILITIES IN ALASKA.

A GOVERNMENT BOARD

To Handle Everything That Can Be Conserved in the Far Northern Country.

[BY UNITED PRESS.]

Washington, Aug. 21.—Immediate development of the vast mineral resources of Alaska, through government ownership of railroads, ships and public utilities, wharves, docks, etc., and the actual mining of Alaskan coal by the government, all to be administered through a board of public works for the benefit of the people was the broad plan outlined in a remarkable speech in the senate today by Senator Robert M. La Follette, republican of Wisconsin.

"Every day makes it more evident that the American people are waking a long light in Alaska," the Wisconsin progressive asserted. "On the one hand there are 25,000 pioneers who are risking their lives and fortunes in the exploration and prospecting of its undeveloped resources. On the other hand are the millions of American people to whom this great storehouse of natural resources belongs. Between them is the enormous power of the greatest concentration of capital that the world has ever known."

"Anyone must see that the foundations are being laid in Wall street for the upbuilding of a monopoly in Alaska equal to that which controls the anthracite coal fields of Pennsylvania."

"When we have before us the history of this anthracite struggle, now consummated in the complete control of Pierpont Morgan against the whole American people can we expect any different result if we permit the Morgan-Guggenheims to get control of Alaska?"

"The power will be in their control of the docks, wharves, mountain passes and the limited coal fields of the north."

La Follette asserted that the government should regard itself as a board of directors pledged to the proper care and development of a property in which the American people were stockholders.

"The first step," he continued, "should be the creation of proper transportation facilities. The government should own and build these transportation facilities. The wharves, docks, railroads and terminals in Alaska should at once be acquired by the government."

"The government should own and operate at least one great coal mine, to supply its naval and military needs, to sell the surplus at a reasonable profit as a check against extortion by private corporations developing other mines."

"The sensible and practicable thing to do is to create a board of public works for Alaska similar to the isthmian canal commission. This board should then undertake, not merely to build a railroad from Controller Bay to the coal fields, but should acquire all the railroads in Alaska and settle at once the policy of government ownership. It should similarly provide for the development of other public utilities such as electric and telephone, wharves, docks and steamship lines if necessary, to deliver the product of Alaska to the Pacific coast."

La Follette declared that the American people could afford to make but a small profit on this investment and this small profit would be high with the Alaska coal fields. He said the products are now high and would be high with the Morgan-Guggenheims in control and demanding their customary extortionate profits.

He alluded to the administration of the Panama canal zone as a precedent for government administration of all utilities. The progressives demanded speedy development of Alaskan resources that the whole people, and particularly those on the Pacific coast, could get the benefit of the reduction in the cost of living through a utilization of Alaska's mineral resources.

"Our future naval power on the Pacific ocean," he declared, "depends upon the utilization of the coal of Alaska."

As a further check, La Follette proposed extension of a leasing system of the coal deposits.

WILSON BLAMES ALL TROUBLE TO WILEY BEFORE COMMITTEE

Secretary of Agriculture Lays All Blame On Head of the Department Under Fire.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, Aug. 21.—Secretary of Agriculture Wilson before the house committee severely criticized Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, of the Bureau of chemistry, for his course as regards the pure food drug work, and told in a more or less general way of the "family trouble" which led to the recommendation for Wiley's dismissal.

Secretary Wilson declared Dr. Wiley in the testimony before the committee had withheld material matters as regards the controversy over sulphur dioxide in fruit.

In appointing the pure food drug inspection board and in the creation of the referee board Wilson said he considered Wiley had been done a kindness rather than been insulted as a chemist.

The Secretary shifted all responsibility for the employment of Dr. Wiley to Dr. Wiley.

Wilson said Dr. Wiley was without a question the head of the chemistry bureau, and that he (Wilson) and not solicitor McChesney was responsible for the increasing power of the solicitor.

ADJOURNMENT WILL BE ON TUESDAY AS HAS BEEN PLANNED

Will Simply Wait To Receive Taft's Veto Message of Cotton Bill—To Take No Action On It.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, Aug. 21.—The leaders of the Senate and House reported the understanding of congress to adjourn tomorrow afternoon. The House will not adjourn, however, without giving the President a chance to transmit his veto on the Cotton bill. It was decided no action will be taken on the veto.

Are Now States.

The President this afternoon signed the joint resolution for the admission of New Mexico and Arizona into the union.

Barred Amendments.

The rule under which the cotton bill was taken up by the House today barred any House amendments to the senate measure. Rep. Madison of Kansas, insurgent republican, denounced the rule as the most drastic ever offered in the House.

Cannon Objects.

Former Speaker Cannon said it was unheard of to vote on twenty-five pages of amendments which had not even been read. Rep. Underwood made a vigorous defense of the rule.

Worked On Message.

[BY UNITED PRESS.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 21.—President Taft denied himself callers early today and worked on his veto message on the cotton bill, which is expected to pass the house this afternoon. The president hopes to expedite adjournment by returning his veto to the house as soon as the bill reaches him.

CALORIC BEATEN BY PARKER PEN AND "Y" WON FROM HANSON

Athletes Practically Clinched Second Place in Commercial League as Result of Contest Saturday Afternoon.

A four-hurling slugfest on the part of the Parker Pen company team Saturday in the opening contest of the doubleheader at Athletic Park added them to a 14 to 2 victory over the Caloric company pastime. Numerous errors on the part of the Chiefs helped the Penmen in winning in eight innings. Eckert was pounded freely in the first half of the contest but handled the ball better for the final four rounds. Two home runs and a number of singles, two-buggers and triples were made off his delivery. Downey, pitching for the Parkers, proved almost he hitless wonder, one lone hit being made by the Caloric, but he issued passes to four men.

By defeating the Hanson Furniture company in Saturday's battle the Y. M. C. A. practically clinched second place in the league, the Caloric lost battle pushing the latter nine back to third place. Howard, on the slab for the Woodworkers, pitched perfect ball up until the fifth, when the Athletics began to pound him and reversed a 1 to 0 score to a 7 to 2 victory. The Hanson scored in the second on a hit and two errors by the Y players and held the lead until the final fifth when the Athletics began to pick off Howard's benders. Cronin, third baseman for the Woodworkers, made the sensational play of the afternoon when he speared a high foul near the fence near third base.

The Plumbers forfeited to the Gazette the game they were to have played with the Gazette at the Fair Grounds.

CUBS WON OUT IN A NINTH-INNING RALLY

Local Team Victors Yesterday in Match With Deerfield, Wis., Nine at the Latter Place.

A ninth-inning batting rally won for the Janesville Cubs Sunday in their game at Deerfield, Wis., with the Deerfield team yesterday afternoon. With the score tied, two to two, in the ninth inning and two men out, the little buns fell on Bowes, a Madison pitcher who was in the box for Deerfield, driving out a triple, a two-bagger and two singles, nothing four runs. Berger, pitching for the Cubs, had good control and although he struck out but three men, allowed but five hits and one loss on balls. His support in the field was excellent. Hay, the new recruit for the Cubs, proved a star behind the bat and handled the position like a veteran.

The Cubs will play the Helot Stars at Yost's Park at the picnic of the grocers tomorrow. The battery tomorrow will be Green and Harris for the Cubs.

SAVES MANY VALUABLE COWS

Harness Arrangement Will Prove of Greatest Aid to Animals During Calving Time.

Many valuable cows have been lost by the womb or calf-bed following the calf. In large herds a harness, as shown, will almost always keep in the bed when there is any danger. This must be kept on for 24 hours after calving, after which time there is not much danger. The part under the tail should be extra wide and so arranged that a clean, sanitary cloth can be put next to the cow's skin. A dangerous subject very often, when lying down in the stall before calving.

Saves the Cows.

will show an inch or so of the uterus, says a writer in the Country Gentleman. She should be carefully watched at calving, and as soon as she has calved put on the harness, which must be tightly strapped on, and then in an hour or so loosen it up to let away the afterbirth or renew the sanitary cloth. It almost always happens that once a cow throws her bed she will do it again. In desperate cases two stitches can be made with a darning needle and fine white tape and left in for two days, giving sloppy drinks with a little opium in them. Also the cow's hind end higher than her front end with inclined floor.

Ignorant.

"The Germans are a very ignorant people," "You astonish me! Germany has some of the best schools in the world, and has produced some of the world's most learned men." "I don't care about that. I could find none of them who could understand my German."

THE ROADS.

Long before the railroads, electric lines, automobiles, aerial navigation, came into existence, the mode of travel was by well beaten thoroughfares which ran between the cities of importance and through the intervening hamlets and villages. Then came the improvement of the inland waterways, the extension of the road building, the great Cumberland Gap road, through which the emigrants walked and drove westward to settle the Ohio valley and later to journey into the great northwest territory. Then, again, came the famous Santa Fe trail westward to the golden land of California. In all these the government played its part. The bringing of the various parts of this nation into closer touch was a serious problem to the growing nation. In the year 1793 congress enacted a law authorizing the construction of a national road from Baltimore westward. An eastern publication advances the idea that this highway which was eventually built for a distance of 650 miles through Pennsylvania, Ohio and Illinois. The width of the roadway was eighty feet, but only thirty feet was paved, and that with a rather crude macadam. The foundation was made of large stones, the top of smaller ones. Road-making was not understood in this country then as it is now, but honest material was put into the construction of this great turnpike, and it is in tolerable condition for long stretches to this day.

A correspondent advances the proposition that the automobilists of the country penetrated by this highway should get together at once with the view to thorough rehabilitation of it. By furnishing in sections the material and the labor for renewing and resurfacing it, automobile owners can make it once more a great thoroughfare between the sea and the Mississippi river. "What better or more appropriate day for inaugurating it not completing this work than Labor day?" It is asked, and the writer adds: "Let every portion of the states along which the national turnpike runs be aroused, by an auto committee passing back and forth for two weeks, to contribute men and money to finish that work in its entire length in one day."

Whether the project can be rushed through with this expedition, the underlying idea in the proposal is a good one. It is folly for the country at large to wait until congress shall take hold of the good roads movement. The nation has grown marvelously since 1793, and the conditions now are so entirely different from what they were then that the government cannot reasonably be asked again to interest itself in road building. This work belongs to the states, to communities and to such associations as might be formed in the present instance by the automobilists. The more individual enterprise and local enthusiasm and effort put into the good roads movement the better. Restoration of the old national road is a feasible as well as a desirable undertaking, and nothing could be more appropriate than that the automobilists of the country should take the enterprise under their amplex and push it to completion. They can hardly fail to obtain state and municipal and private aid, if they give evidence of their determination to put the project through.

THE COST.

The Wisconsin Railway Rate Commission has handed down its decision in the case of the City of Janesville vs. the Janesville Water Company. The public were led to believe that an examination of the charges of the water company by the commission would lead to a wholesale reduction in rates to consumer which would be greatly beneficial. The suit has been used as campaign argument, with success, and the result is far from even approaching the semblance of a real radical reduction. City Attorney Maxfield acted in good faith, doubtless, really believing the results would be as he expected, but evidently he was misled. The cost to the city for its water supply will be increased some ten thousand dollars or more while the reduction to the consumer is so small it really amounts to nothing. The only real beneficiary of the new consumers' rate, is the Chicago and Northwestern railroad, which receives a minimum rate. The average consumer, the small property-owner, the "Poor People" of campaign lore, suffer in reality by having their taxes increased while their rates are reduced a trifle. Taking it in detail the only real gain is the fact that the water company must own and install all water meters in the city and pay for those already put in by private persons. Just how this will be accomplished is not yet decided, but it will possibly be by either paying a rental for the use of them or installment payments, which would mean a slight reduction per quarter. The fact, however, remains that the city lost in the contention and that taxes will increase. This is the blow-up of the much talked of reduction.

GENERAL OPINION.

Taft and his veto of the wool measure showed just the courage his friends believed he possessed. He will have the endorsement of many people not in the least in sympathy with high protection on his veto of the woolen bill. It was a consistent and courageous act, the more so as he frankly acknowledges that some amendment of the woolen schedule seems to be called for. He has always contended that congress committed itself to a definite policy in appointing a commission to find out what that reduction should be. There is no justification for the legislature stultifying itself by passing revision measures before the Tariff Commission has had a chance to report.

We say all this, recognizing fully that the result of the Tariff Commission's labors may be a disappointment. We do not believe that it would be possible to establish any fair ratio between this country and any other on the cost of production. In no two mills in this country is the cost the same. We can say as much with confidence of competing manufacturers in other countries. Not only does the cost vary with different mills, but also with the same mill from week to week. In Washington, moreover, there are half a dozen or more agencies of the government service which now collect and publish all the information the Tariff Commission is in the least likely to secure.

In spite of this the President acted rightly. The commission's report on woolen manufacturers may not be worth much, but congress has in effect pledged itself to wait for it, and the business of the country has been conducted on that understanding.

COOPER WITH TAFT.

While Congressman H. A. Cooper has been classed as one of the insurgent republican members of congress, he was the first Wisconsin representative to desert that body of disturbers and stand by the President and the republican platform. His vote in upholding the President on his veto measures is heartily endorsed by the conservative republicans of his district and by many who have in the past been his political opponents. While Mr. Cooper may have differed in details he was evidently a true republican with it all and his example caused two other Wisconsin members to also desert the false colors of insurgency. President Taft has come out of this extra session with colors flying. His one pet measure, Canadian reciprocity, was passed just as he desired it and his veto of all tariff measures has been upheld by congress, as it should have been. On the other hand the insurgents have become a divided faction and their great slogan of "People's Needs" has been buried beneath the avalanche of public condemnation of their fight against republican doctrines at critical periods.

Up in a northern Wisconsin city the property-owners were so anxious to have hedges and shrubbery that they planted Canadian thistles and tumble weeds. As these are self-sowing the crop next year will be a storm-winder.

Congress is about to give an imitation of an Arab folding its tent and stealing away some time tomorrow.

STATE PRESS COMMENT.

Beyond Their Power.

Can Chaire Leader: Congress may pass publicity bills but it's a 100 to 1 shot none of them will ever reveal the inside working of the political game.

Not "Well Healed."

Milwaukee Sentinel: The man who has just returned from a vacation finds it easy to peel his skin, but extremely difficult to peel anything off the remains of his bank roll.

The Vulnerable Point.

Wausau Record-Breeze: These British stalkers show that they know the weak point in the Saxon armor, when they tie up the food supply.

Bulls and the Wolf.

Marquette Eagle-Star: And now the wheat bulls are again killing the crops. But it is safe to predict that when the harvest returns are received there will be plenty for home consumption and some to export.

In Ages Past.

Milwaukee Journal: Morgan's interview after his return from Europe was confined to a couple of grants and a command to the reporters to beat it. J. P. is still giving evidence that he was designed to live in the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, when lordly rights were divine.

His Action Foreseen.

Appleton Post: The president's veto of the statehood bill on account of the pernicious provision for the recall of the judiciary in Arizona is no more than to be expected of a just and upright judge such as the president is qualified to be. The Post among others counted upon him to do it, and has not been disappointed.

Reminiscent "Toddy."

Beloit News: In the last few issues of the Outlook the colonel has been in a reminiscent mood and has devoted pages to telling what happened when he was president. In view of his becoming "Grandma Roosevelt" he may be pardoned next week if he refers to his anti-race attitude actively during his regime.

Troublesome Times.

Watertown Leader: A new revolution has been started in Mexico and 20,000 men have taken up arms to overthrow the government of the dictator, Madero, and thousands of the citizens of that unhappy country are petitioning Diaz to return and bring order out of the chaos into which the insurgents have plunged that country. In a business way, this country will have a similar experience under the leadership of impractical politicians, who are seeking their own advantage and not caring a continental for the country.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

"TO THE UNKNOWN LAND."

Of recent pictures, one of surpassing interest and which has attracted much attention is that of Hilar Lighton, entitled "To the Unknown Land."

The picture tells a story that, alas, is all too frequent in our common life—a story in symbol of a little child's death and the grief of a mother.

This is the picture story: A small boat is leaving the shore. At the bow sits the oarsman—Death. In the stern is a resplendent white-robed angel, whose great drooping wings touch the water on either side.

In the arms of the angel is the wee child, smiling up into the face of the heavenly messenger come to take it to "the Unknown Land."

That is half the picture. The other half—the sad phase of it—is the figure of the bereft mother kneeling on the shore, alone, desolate, bowed in agony, as the child is being borne away on the waste of waters.

Her sky is dark, and the only gleam of light is the radiance that streams from the presence of the angel visitant and reflected from the face of the babe. The picture is great—because it is true.

It fills Tolstoy's definition of real art—a message from the heart to the heart.

How poignant is the suffering of a mother who, having gone down into the valley of the shadow to hold her babe in her arms, feels it wrenched from her embrace—forever!

Only a mother can know such suffering.

In the first paroxysms of her poor, broken heart no consolation can avail. The picture truly shows the mother alone. Alone she must tread the white path of sorrow. Alone and desolate!

But—by and by she begins dearly to hold in her heart some such picture as that one of the heavenly messenger holding and guarding her child as the oarsman rows it away.

Or—She has caught the vision of a shepherd, tender faced, who holds out his arms to say, "Suffer the little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom." "Of such?"—her babe—is the kingdom.

And though the tears yet flow, they are no longer bitter tears of agony. Through the telescope of her tears she has looked upon a vision of her baby in "the Unknown Land."

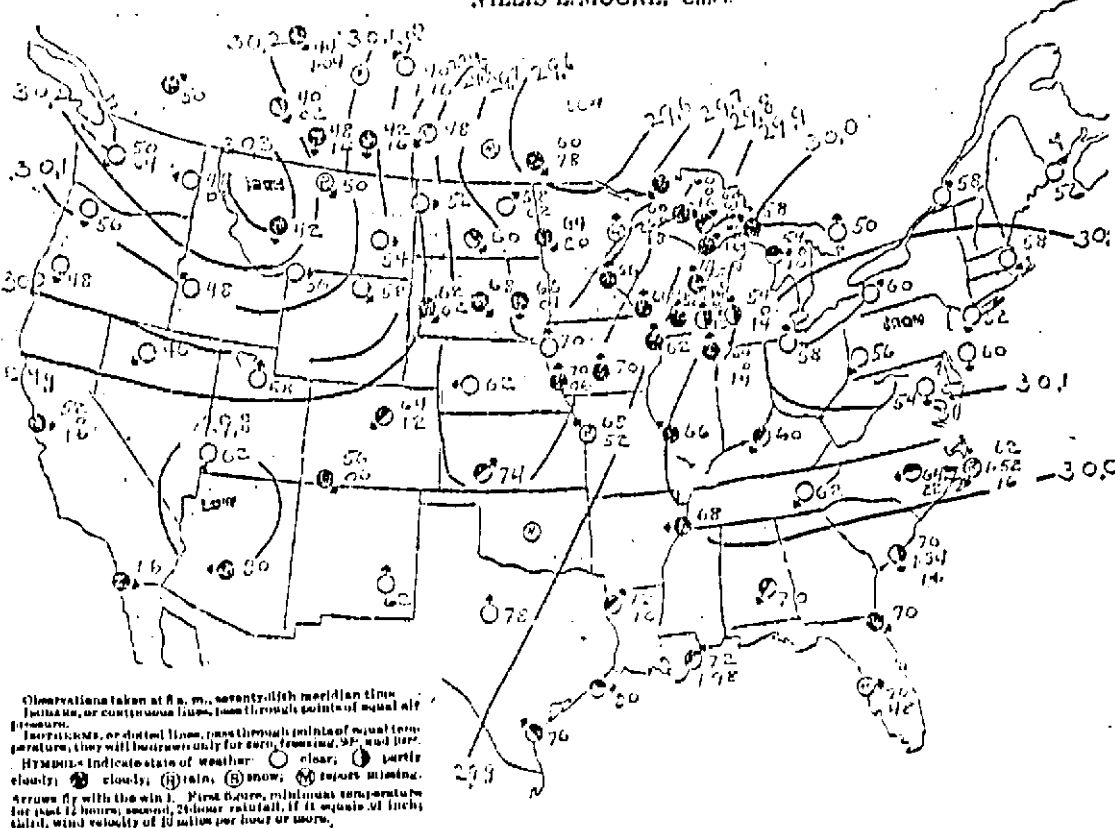

Hard Enough.

"Do you expect to rank as one of the leaders of thought in your generation?" "My friend," answered Senator Sorghum, "it's hard enough work to electioneer for an office in your own time without trying to jolly posterity."

WEATHER BUREAU

WILLIS L. MOORE, Chief.

WEATHER CONDITIONS.

August 21, 1911.
The most important feature of the weather map today is the atmospheric disturbance, the center of which is over western Ontario, that stretches over the valleys of the Red and Mississippi rivers. It has been attended by showers and thunderstorms in the Northwest, and is followed in the northern Rocky mountains by a cool wave, a temperature of 35 degrees only 4 degrees above freezing being recorded at Yellowstone Park this morning. The weather is generally fair in the east and south today, but a barometric depression that developed yesterday over the Carolina coast was attended by heavy rains on the south Atlantic and east Gulf coasts.

In this vicinity the passage of the disturbance in the Northwest will be attended by showers and thunderstorms this afternoon and tonight. Tuesday will be fair and cooler.

VARDAMAN WINS MISSISSIPPI PRIMARY.

Two candidates for Mississippi United States Senatorship. Jackson, Miss.—The returns in the democratic state senatorial primaries show former Governor Vardaman as the successful candidate over Senator LeRoy Percy and C. H. Alexander. This will place in the halls of congress one of the strong leaders of the South.

The Organist's Fox Pass.

"At that wedding last night," said Mrs. Lapsing, "the organist made the worst mistake I ever heard of. He played Middlemarch's wedding march when the bride party came in and the march from 'Lamorna' when they passed out."

Substitution.

"Haven't you any purpose in life," asked the minister of the melancholy druggist, "No," sighed the druggist; "but I've something just as good!"—Red Hen.

Division of Trouble.

"What men think," remarked the knowing woman, "causes fully one-third of all the trouble in the world." "Yes," rejoined the mere man, "and what women say causes the other two-thirds."—Chicago Daily News.

MUSICIANS' PICNIC

DREW LARGE CROWDS

Thousands of People Gathered at Yost's Park Yesterday for Joint Band Picnic.

Thousands of people from points in Northern Illinois and Southern Wisconsin attended the third annual picnic of the American Federation of Musicians at Yost's Park yesterday. It was estimated that it was the largest crowd that ever gathered at Yost's. Interurban cars gave fifteen-minute service from Beloit and half hour service from Janesville were heavily loaded with picnickers, and vehicles of every description carried merry-makers to the scene of the picnic.

The Janesville band as well as like organizations from the cities in the southern part of the state and northern Illinois were in attendance, and in the afternoon gave a concert together. Separate bands gave concerts throughout the day so that music was never lacking. Ball games and other amusements were offered for entertainment.

RECOVERS SUIT CASE STOLEN LAST NIGHT

Case Belonging To Miss Marie Wagner of Rockford, Stolen From In Front of Hotel, Found Last Night.

Thieves last night stole from Miss Marie Wagner of Rockford, a suit case containing clothing, which had been left in front of the Interurban office at the Myers hotel. Miss Wagner, who had come in on one of the trains from the north reached the hotel last night about half past seven o'clock and left the suitcase outside, while waiting for the eight o'clock car to Rockford. The theft was discovered about a quarter to eight. Miss Wagner immediately notified the hotel officials and the Interurban officials were notified. The night officers were also informed of the theft. A search was made and about ten o'clock last evening the missing property was found in the court house yard. The lock of the case had been broken and the case pried open. The thieves unlocked the case and turned everything topsy-turvy in it, but as far as could be learned took nothing as there was only wearing apparel in it. Miss Wagner secured her property today.

WILL GO TO MADISON TO SEE COMMISSION

City Attorney Maxfield to Have Them Explain Their Ruling in Water Case.

It is probable that within the next day or two City Attorney Harry Maxfield will go to Madison to consult with the Railway Rate Commission as to just what they mean by the wording of certain clauses of the recent decision as regards the Janesville Water Company. Mr. Maxfield still holds that the commission has no jurisdiction as to doing away with the old agreement between the city and the Water Company and if the case is appealed, it will be on these grounds.

LEAN-TO DESTROYED BY AN EARLY FIRE

Sparks From Engines Thought To Have Set Fire To Buildings Owned By Patrick Heffernan On Riverside Street.

Fire early this morning destroyed the lean-to and gutted a barn on the property of Patrick Heffernan on Riverside street, near the Rock River Woolen Mills. The lean-to and shed are located adjacent to the right of way of the Janesville & Southern line and it is thought that sparks from an engine may have caused the fire. An alarm was sent into the fire department from box 52 at half past one o'clock and a few minutes later a second alarm was rung in. About three tons of straw were contained in the barn and this was about half destroyed. The lean-to was beyond redemption when the wagons arrived, but the firemen managed to save a part of the barn. Two streams of water were used in fighting the fire. A few hundred dollars will probably cover the loss.

ARNER-CLOUGH NUPTIALS CELEBRATED SATURDAY

REMAINS OF SHIPPY SENT TO BELVIDERE

Body of Man Who Killed Himself by Jumping in Front of Train Curled in Belvidere Saturday.

On Saturday afternoon the remains of Charles Shippy, of Belvidere, who committed suicide by jumping in front of a train at the Northwestern depot, were removed from the potter's lot at Oak Hill cemetery and shipped to Belvidere on the train leaving here about five o'clock. The body was interred at Belvidere Saturday evening.

The disposition of Shippy's remains caused a considerable tangle in arrangements for the funeral here. The railroad company offered to pay $75 toward the expenses of the funeral and this amount was turned over to Mr. Herbert, an undertaker at Belvidere. About a week ago he and Shippy's widow came to Janesville to get the body and a permit to remove it was secured from Health Officer Dr. M. A. Cunningham. The sexton of the local cemetery, however, refused to dig up the remains and it was put up to Mr. Anderson to find someone to do this. Finally he and Undertaker Horatio Nelson dug up the cadaver on Saturday and shipped it to Belvidere. After the refusal to dig up the body the Belvidere undertaker turned over the money to Shippy's widow who refused to pay Mr. Anderson the bill incurred by the county for the funeral here, unless Shippy's watch and chain were secured, the chain being especially desired as she had given it to him for a Christmas present. Mr. Shippy's brother had secured this while in Janesville. Undertaker Anderson went to Belvidere and saw the brother and demanded the watch and the latter turned it over to the widow, although he denied at first that he had it. This settled matters satisfactorily for all concerned and the widow paid to Mr. Anderson the county's bill.

WILL NOT ABANDON PLANS FOR CIRCUS

Despite Fact New Track Is To Be Laid On Washington Street By Street Car Company.

Despite the fact that the Janesville Traction Company are planning to begin active work of tearing up their tracks in the First Ward at once to lay the present rails with heavier ones, the plans for the Society circus will not be abandoned. "It will only mean a longer haul for the horses," said one of the committee today. "Mr. Warren V. Wheelock has charge of the transportation and he will have plenty of horses to carry all who desire to go to the grounds. Really we expect a large attendance."

The Society circus plans many innovations that are to be most amusing. E. H. Peterson has a troupe of real genuine hippopotamuses, for the different acts of giraffes, hippopotamuses, "The blood sweating Beemth of Holy Writ", Elephants and bears. Mrs. Frank Hodge, who is the leading spirit in this venture, stated today, "I am certain the circus will take place as we have gone too far with our plans to back out now. It will be worth any battle time to see the wonders that will be disclosed and they will be most clever."

MRS. M. G. JEFFRIS HAD SERIOUS FALL

Tore the Ligaments in Her Side by Falling Down Steps at Lake Kegonsa.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Stoughton, Aug. 21.—Mrs. M. G. Jeffris, who is spending the month of August with her family at the T. S. Earle cottage at Lake Kegonsa, met with a serious accident on Sunday through a fall down a flight of cement steps leading to the landing in front of the Sweeney cottage. Mrs. Jeffris was one of a party that was about to start on a sailing trip in the Sweeney yacht and intended her footing, falling on the cement curbing, striking on her side and tearing several of the ligaments loose. Dr. Truettson, of Stoughton, who has a cottage on the lake, was summoned and dressed her injuries. She was reported easier today.

"MYSTERIOUS JOHN" IN TROUBLE AGAIN

Old Offender Arraigned And Sentenced to Eight Days in Jail for Drunkenness This Morning.

"Mysterious John" Kendrick, whose appearance before the municipal court for drunkenness was almost innumerable, was again arraigned this morning and on his plea of guilty was sentenced to eight days in the county jail in default of payment of a fine of $1 and costs of $5.10. The "mysterious one," it is alleged, took a few drinks too many Saturday night, with a resulting expansion of the chest and of his own opinion of himself. His remarks to a certain gentleman became quite insulting, whereupon the latter placed his fist against John's forehead somewhat forcibly. The offender was badly damaged as the result of the encounter.

Prosperity and Andy Farling could not remain together and Andy is today lodged in the county jail, serving out a sentence of seven days for drunkenness. Farling was arraigned in the court Saturday morning and paid a fine for the same offense, but by Saturday night had again taken into custody by the officers. The last spree completely depleted his financial resources and he was unable to negotiate the funds for a fine of $3 and costs of $1.10. A fine of $3 and costs was fixed against W. Lane, but sentence was suspended and Lane was given a "dispass" and ordered to leave immediately.

BELOIT WOMAN MUST PAY FOR THE SHOES

Viola Gregory, Who It Is Alleged, Secured Wearing Apparel by False Pretenses, Must Pay For Shoes

By giving the name of a Janesville woman, Viola Gregory of Beloit, it is alleged, secured wearing apparel from Janesville dealers on approval, promising to return the articles if they were not satisfactory, but apparently intending to keep them. Two pairs of tan shoes were secured in this manner from the Ames Heiberg and Company store, a large hat from Mrs. Nellie Walker of the Simpson store and a blue suit from the store of Norton & Mahoney. Gloria in the Heiberg establishment became acquainted with the shoes and telephone the woman whose name was given. The latter said she had given no order for shoes and the police were told of the occurrence. Officer Ed. Hatten traced the woman to the home of a friend where she was staying and the suit and hat, which had not been worn, were returned to their rightful owners. The shoes, however, had been worn and the Heiberg company refused to take them back, demanding the money for them. This the woman promised to do by next Saturday night, with the understanding that if she did not settle for them the store would prosecute her.

INCOME TAX LAW ABOLISHES OFFICE

Office of County Supervisor of Assessments Is Done Away With, According to Reading of Statute.

According to the reading of the new income tax law, the office of county supervisor of assessment is abolished and the assessor of incomes shall, after the first Monday in January, 1912, perform his duties. The sections relating to this are as follows:

"Section 1087m-25. 1. On and after the first Monday in January, 1912, the office of county supervisor of assessment is hereby abolished.

"2. The assessor of incomes shall on and after the first Monday of January, 1912, in addition to the duties and powers herein imposed and conferred upon him, perform all the duties and possess all the powers heretofore imposed and conferred by law upon the said county supervisor of assessment. The assessor of incomes shall be under the direction and control of the state tax commission, and shall make such reports to the commission, to the county board of review and the county board of supervisors, and perform such other duties as the commission shall direct."

"The office of supervisor of assessments in Rock county has been and is at present held by Frank P. Starr. The duties of his office will henceforth be combined with those of income tax assessor, and his appointment, which formerly came from the county board, will now come from the state tax commission under whose direct supervision he will work. Mr. Starr has not announced any intention as a candidate for the new position. Further terms of the law relating to this office are as follows:

"Not less than thirty days prior to the first of March, 1912, there shall be selected and appointed by the state tax commission, an assessor of incomes for each assessment district in the state, who shall hold office for a term of three years unless sooner removed as hereinafter provided."

"Section 1087m-10. 1. The state tax commission and the assessors of income shall annually on the first day of January, or as soon thereafter as practicable, proceed to assess as hereinafter provided every income received during the preceding calendar year liable to taxation under the provisions of this act. The assessment of corporations, joint stock companies and associations shall be made by the state tax commission, and the assessment of persons, other than corporations, joint stock companies and associations shall be by the county assessor of incomes."

MUTE ACCUSED OF TAKING MACHINE

Man Whom Harry McDaniels Taught to Ride Here, Thought to Have Stolen Motorcycle in Madison.

A deaf mute whom Harry McDaniels, a local dealer, taught to run a motorcycle, is thought to have been the one who stole a motorcycle in Madison on Saturday. Word was received from the chief of police at Madison this morning of the theft of a Thor motorcycle, painted blue with a three horsepower engine. The motorcycle bore a state license No. 50. The man suspected of the theft is described as about twenty-one or twenty-two years of age, with light red hair, reddish face and wearing a red and white sweater, gray striped pants, and brown cap with no coat. A man answering this description was the one whom Mr. McDaniels taught to ride the machine and Mr. McDaniels is confident it is the same one.

Changed His Mind.

"You folks used to have a justice out here who was noted for his vindictiveness toward scorching automobilists," says the visitor to the salaried. "What's become of officer? Has he retired from office?" "No," explained the native, "but you see he saved enough from his fowls last year to buy himself a roadster."

St. Veronica's Handkerchief.

"The Handkerchief of Saint Veronica" created a sensation as a pictorial phenomenon, the Saviour's eyes appearing to open and close. It was painted by Gabriel Max, a German historical painter of the Munich school, in 1874.

COUNCIL WILL ACT ON STREET MATTER

Plans and Specifications For Repairs Necessary on Center Avenue Will Be Submitted at Meeting Tonight.

Plans and specifications for the repairs necessary on Center avenue from Pleasant street to Riverside street have been prepared and will be presented as part of the report of the street assessment committee at the regular meeting of the common council this evening and it is thought the question which was the cause of considerable discussion will finally be settled.

Harry Haggart, who was employed by the city to audit the books of the city treasurer, will present his report at this evening's session. The report shows the books of the treasurer to be absolutely correct, with the exception of eighty-eight cents, caused by a clerical error. Other matters to be brought to the attention of the city fathers are the passing of the salary list, accepting a grade established for Wells street and the report of Superintendent Bull of the stone crusher plant on the work done at the plant the past two weeks.

MISSION SERVICES HELD AT EDGERTON

Special Church Services Held at St. John's Lutheran Church, Sunday—Other News.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Edgerton, Aug. 21.—The center of attraction in Edgerton on Sunday was the mission services held at St. John's Lutheran church, both in the morning and afternoon. Rev. C. Zollman of Horicon occupied the pulpit in the morning and Rev. Theodore Bretcher of Beloit in the afternoon. Both services proved highly interesting and with special music by the choir made the event still more prominent. The attendance at both services was exceedingly large, in fact the largest in the history of the church. The collections, too, at both services, are the largest ever known. While here Rev. Zollman and Rev. Bretcher were guests of Rev. and Mrs. J. C. Spillman.

Personal News.

Inconstant Cat.

An angora cat belonging to a Massachusetts woman took up its abode with the pig last fall and slept every night on the pig's back up to a few weeks ago, when the pig was killed. The cat mourned the loss of its friend for a day or two until it discovered the horse stall. Now every chance the cat gets it sleeps on the back of the horse.

Alum for Household Use. Alum should never be absent from any household. It has a very good effect if applied to bleeding wounds, as it checks the loss of blood. Added to milk in small quantities it is good for toothache. It must be held in the mouth, not swallowed. For bleeding of the mouth or tongue, a wash in cold water in which alum has been dissolved is very effective.

The Skin and Not the Blood. Until recently it has been a generally accepted proposition that eczema was a disease of the blood, and that in order to cure it, the blood must be purified and enriched by internal remedies. Careful experiments and scientific investigations have taught us that eczema is purely skin disease, and curable through the skin alone. A great majority of persons afflicted with eczema have no other ailment, which is accepted as positive proof that it is purely a skin disease. Having established this fact, the chemists of the American Drug and Press Association set about to compound a prescription that would successfully cope with this disease, and after much investigating brought out Meritol Eczema Remedy, the effect of which is marvelous. If you are afflicted with this loathsome disease, do not delay trying Meritol Eczema Remedy. You will be surprised at its prompt action, its soothing effect and its permanent results. Added to milk in small quantities it is good for toothache. It must be held in the mouth, not swallowed. For bleeding of the mouth or tongue, a wash in cold water in which alum has been dissolved is very effective.

Lack of Cooperation. "I wish," said the revivalist, "Dr. or Grimshaw wasn't quite so strong on doctrinal points. As fast as I bring people into the church he tries to put them out of it for heresy."

The Skin and Not the Blood. Until recently it has been a generally accepted proposition that eczema was a disease of the blood, and that in order to cure it, the blood must be purified and enriched by internal remedies. Careful experiments and scientific investigations have taught us that eczema is purely skin disease, and curable through the skin alone. A great majority of persons afflicted with eczema have no other ailment, which is accepted as positive proof that it is purely a skin disease. Having established this fact, the chemists of the American Drug and Press Association set about to compound a prescription that would successfully cope with this disease, and after much investigating brought out Meritol Eczema Remedy, the effect of which is marvelous. If you are afflicted with this loathsome disease, do not delay trying Meritol Eczema Remedy. You will be surprised at its prompt action, its soothing effect and its permanent results. Reliable Drug Co. are commissioned by the Association to sell it in Janesville.

Laundrymen Seek Public Favor. St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 21.—Plans for a nation-wide advertising campaign to remove, if possible, from the public mind some popular prejudices against laundry methods are to be discussed at the annual convention of the National Laundrymen's Association which began in this city today. The convention is attended by members from all sections of the country and by representatives of all the industries connected with the laundry business.

The Boy Puzzle

By DR. I. S. KIRLEY

ANTECEDENTS & CONSEQUENCES

When we think of him as an animal, the scientists tell us that he has the same origin as the other animals, has traveled further and that, somewhere on the way, a new power got hold of him, that has made a difference as wide as the universe between him and them. They tell us that there are more than fifty-seven varieties of remnants, left in him, of the former stages of life and that he is a sort of recapitulation of them all. Over that point we will not linger.

It was divinely arranged that he should have a physical origin and a necessary likeness to his ancestors. And we know that a responsible and epoch making ancestor of his was made in the image of God and, though there has been a wreckage in that image, he is a descendant of that ancestor and still shows the traces of it. Like produces like, even if there is some personal unlikeness and even dislike. His heavenly origin is not to be forgotten. His body is not only divinely fashioned, but divinely furnished with its occupant, whether he is good or bad. "Who made you?" asked the Sunday school teacher of a big, rough mountaineer of twelve who had just come to town. "Dunno," he grunted out.

"You don't? Why, Bobbie knows. Now, Bobbie, will you tell us who made you?"

"Yes," answered the lad of six, "God made me."

"Now, you see, a little boy like Bobbie, remembers that."

"Guess he orler," grunted the big boy, "looks like he ain't been made more'n a fortnight." No one may get far enough away from his origin to forget.

It is of practical importance to bear in mind that the personal traits, which make him the kind of boy he is, are due to the kind of ancestors he has. Heredity is a great serious, sometimes comical, but oftener tragic, force with him. He is more apt to be like his immediate parents, yet, sometimes, by a curious kind of perversity, he runs back into the generations and selects some ridiculous or contemptible trait, which nobody but a boy would ever think of selecting and builds the freakish thing into the house of his life.

But he usually gets his traits from the nearest generation, and if any are to be bad people, it must not be his father and mother, because they furnish environment as well as ancestry to him. They must be able to endow him with the very qualities he will need all his life and must see that he uses them; if not, they have no right to undertake to endow him at all. As he has to take what they give him, they are the folks I am at this particular moment, most emphatically speaking to.

Another fact is that he is a blend which makes a new type, a product different from all the elements of the preceding generation; like his father and mother, but unlike them; something brand new, the latest thing in boys, a new chemical reaction.

This indicates what he is headed for. It is not enough to say that he is to flower into a man, but the flowerance is the thing we are thrillingly interested in. It also indicates the rather helpless, and sometimes hopeless, condition in which he finds himself. The unchosen factors are many and mighty and sometimes mystifying. He cannot choose his parents, though I know boys who will regret to their dying day that they did not have the choosing. He has to take the kind of eyes, nose, teeth, chin, ears and feet handed out to him. You will not find one boy in a hundred who has not spent valuable time wishing his nose were not of the turn up variety or his lip not so lengthy or his feet not so ambitious. Even before girls get mixed up in his visions and his dreams, he will spend time at the mirror considering his defects. The community in which he is born, or reared, is not of his choosing and is considered none of his concern, though many a boy is ruined by it. When their parents died, Tom was put into one family and Joe into another. Tom breathed in love and hope and nobility, Joe was poisoned to the very tips of his soul and life, poisoned forever. His atmosphere is prepared for him, though it may be heavy with lack of appreciation, and with unbearable burdens, or filled with moral pollution; or rare with adulations and false pleasures; or languid with enervating luxury; or poisoned with hypocrisy and pretense. He did not choose them, he only has to take them. His seldom chooses his companions or teachers; they are thrust upon him. And sometimes they try to push him into his profession, but, by that time, he is ready to have a hand in it himself. And even the daring sacrifice, of selecting a wife for him, is often attempted.

So, among his unchosen factors, we may name ancestors, remote and immediate, place of birth and residence, schools and companions, personal make up, physical and psychological.

At Pine Hill Junction

A statistician has hunted up the figures to prove that 98 out of every 100 true lovers have at least one quarrel before marriage. The two per cent. who escape the quarrel are not worth writing about. They really know nothing about love.

Miss Mildred Christie and Charles Osgood belonged to the 98 per cent. and more. The young lady had it down in her diary that they had quarreled five times in the six months they had been engaged. It is of no use to ask what lovers quarrel about. When they feel like it they can get up a row about the man in the moon.

Five foolish quarrels and five blissful make-ups and the sixth quarrel under way within ten minutes after Charles Osgood had entered the parlor of the Christie mansion on a certain evening.

Miss Mildred had been shopping in the afternoon. She had met a gentleman of her acquaintance who had had the misfortune to lose a leg and had a cork one to replace it. They had stood on a street corner and chatted for five minutes. Mr. Osgood had passed by on the other side and noticed it and from that moment a thundercloud rested on his intellectual brow. He carried it to the Christie mansion with him. It was noticed as soon as he entered and was met with the query:

"Well, I suppose I've committed murder again."

"Miss Christie," answered the thunder cloud, "I saw you today talking with a man on the street!"

"Well?"

"That man has a cork leg! I know him and I know he has a cork leg! Can you not understand—can you never be made to understand that?"

"I prefer a man with a cork leg to one with a wooden head, Mr. Christie!"

"Meaning me?"

"As you like it!"

Mr. Christie arose. The thunder cloud deepened. The lightning flashed. He wanted to strike and slatter and destroy, but he held on to himself until he had made a fright bow and left the house and then took it out on a newsboy who asked him if he wanted to sell his face. The sixth and last! Weeks and months went by. No notes—no bouquets—no calls! The ice man went his rounds and the big world moved on.

On a certain railroad in the United States is a junction called Pine Hill. Trains there connect with a trolley line. At the junction there is a shed and a platform.

On a certain summer day there were three arrivals at the junction within an hour. The first arrival was a farmer's wife who plumped down on a hard seat and exclaimed:

"Now, then, I s'pose I've got to wait here 'till the cows come home!"

The next arrival was Charles Osgood.

Then the bob-tailed trolley car rolled in from somewhere and there was a third arrival. Miss Mildred Christie, who had been visiting country relatives, walked in and took a seat. Mr. Osgood gave a gasp. The farmer's wife uttered a chuckle. Miss Mildred was about to give a start and turn pale when she brought all her resolution to bear and didn't do it.

"Nice day?" said the farmer's wife from her seat, eight feet away.

No answer.

"Nice hot day?"

No answer.

"But not as hot as a year ago today when I was almost sunstruck. Lordy, but they thought I was a gonorr!"

Mr. Osgood was looking at the board wall and Miss Christie had her eyes on the floor. The farmer's wife went out on the platform for ten minutes, and then strolled back. No change in the situation.

"I wish there was an old cow here for me to talk to!" sighed the woman as she sat down. "If you two folks are dummies why don't you carry slates to write on? I fell down and bit my tongue once and couldn't talk for a week. I had to write with a piece of chalk, and I tell you I kept my old man busy. If you are dummies you needn't be ashamed to say so. I'm not the one to make fun of anybody."

Miss Christie wanted to giggle, but she didn't.

Mr. Osgood wanted to smile, but he didn't.

"Well, I'll go out again," said the farmer's wife as she rose up. "I'm no great hand to talk, but I'll be damned if I can bear to sit around like a bump on a log. If you two people want to sit and not and never move a toe then go right ahead. If I was a girl again that stick of a fellow would either be talking to me or I'd know the reason why!"

Walk, walk, walk, for five minutes, and then the farmer's wife came near or to say, as it is herself:

"He's still got a poker down his back, and she hasn't moved her little toe! Lord, but what folks there be in this world! No wonder eggs have gone up to forty cents a dozen! Well, keep it up if it costs you any good."

"Mildred!"

"Char—Charlie!"

"I'm sorry—very, sorry."

"So am I."

And when the good woman came again and found them sitting side by side with a look of happiness on their faces, she held up her hands and exclaimed:

"And you'd have gone right along being two idiots all your lives if it hadn't been for me!"

PROHIBITION IN TEXAS EFFECTS SENATORSHIP.

Austin, Texas.—As a result of the victory of the wets in the Texas prohibition fight, the senatorial situation has taken on a new aspect.

Three leading candidates for the next election are the present Senator Bailey, Governor O. B. Colquhitt, ex-Governor Thomas M. Campbell, both Senator Bailey and Governor Colquhitt are admittedly identified with the saloon interests. On the other hand, Campbell has leaned toward the reformers. With a marginal victory for the wets, the saloon interests stand little show of receiving much consideration at the hands of the Legislature.

A Real Five-Passenger Touring Car With Complete Equipment and the Powerful K-R-I-T Motor That Has Never Been Defeated in a Hill-Climb

Roomy and Comfortable

You will like the K-R-I-T touring car the minute you see it because it has such a comfortable, roomy body—so much leg room in both front and rear seats—such deep, restful upholstery—such high quality finish. You will look in vain for anything but savors of cheapness.

Upholstering is in genuine leather—not imitation—and the finishing, painting and upholstery are all done in the K-R-I-T shops. The K-R-I-T has the lines, the looks, the equipment, and the mechanical quality that mean satisfaction to the purchaser.

Great Strength But Light Weight

The K-R-I-T Touring Car carries its load of five passengers with easy luxury. There is reserve strength at every point, and yet by skillful design and engineering the weight has been kept down. This means that when you buy a K-R-I-T you get a car that will be economical on tires, use less gasoline and oil and cost less to operate at every point. Isn't it a trim, swift, speedy-looking model?

Conquers Every Test

The factory engineers have been testing out this touring car for months. A sample car carrying six full-grown people was put through every possible stunt. Hills that would stall it—sand that it would not go through—could not be found. The K-R-I-T touring car conquered every test with ease; it would go anywhere that any car could go.

Easy Riding Springs

Extra Strong Axles

Springs were tested—one style and size after another eliminated till the qualities insisted upon, extreme flexibility and strength, had been found. Vanadium steel used exclusively.

Axles were given the most severe and exacting trials; were subjected to abuse worse than would ever be encountered in the service of any owner; strength and absolute safety were demanded and secured. Note the equalized brakes, large wheels and demountable rims.

Perfect Cooling

It was found impossible to overheat the engine—because the simple, automatic thermo-siphon cooling system and efficient automatic oil circulating system always worked.

In body design nothing that was not roomy and comfortable was even given consideration. A real touring car was intended—and when you buy a touring car you want room and comfort—wide seats, lots of leg room—you get in the K-R-I-T.

Now Ready to Demonstrate

The first car delivered on our order is now on exhibition. Come and take a good look at it. Notice the size of the body—the graceful lines, the wide doors, the size of wheels and tires—the strength and length of the springs—the efficiency of brakes; the compactness and simplicity of motor—the size of the axles—you will find a quality and perfection of construction and finish that is hitherto unknown.

A Remarkable Motor

One of the country's leading technical editors—an acknowledged authority whose opinion is eagerly sought by automobile engineers—unhesitatingly indorses the K-R-I-T ball-bearing motor as the finest, most efficient motor of its size in the world. Users find it wonderfully powerful, economical and reliable. It is certainly one of the simplest, most compact and accessible motors built. It is supported at three points; crank case and gear case are made of aluminum, and the complete power plant is enclosed, making it dust-proof and oil tight. We use a self-adjusting multiple disc clutch that runs in oil. It is noiseless—and takes hold without any jerk. Go into K-R-I-T construction in detail and you will see why it is the best motor on the market for the money. The other points of K-R-I-T cars are just as high grade.

K-R-I-T quality at K-R-I-T prices is made possible by the fact that every part is made within the K-R-I-T organization. This eliminates extravagant parts makers' profits and assures the highest quality workmanship and material. The K-R-I-T idea is quick sales, small profits from each sale—and a large volume of business. But always and everywhere high quality is insisted upon.

Costs Dealers More

That's why K-R-I-T dealers willingly pay more for this exceptional car than any other dealer pays for any other car of similar price. We can afford to sell cars at less profit—because we sell the many instead of the few. We get the volume of business—and the high quality of K-R-I-T cars makes the volume grow. We regard the K-R-I-T agency as an important asset—we are proud to have it—because K-R-I-T Quality makes it valuable.

We cordially invite you to come and inspect K-R-I-T cars.

REPORT BIG YIELDS IN NORTHERN PARTS

Prof. R. A. Moore of State University
Tells of Remarkable Yields of Wheat and Clover Seed.
[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Aug. 21.—One prominent fact emphasized by the present season of crops in Wisconsin is the surprising stand of northern Wisconsin crops compared with those elsewhere in the state. This is the statement made today by Prof. R. A. Moore, the university agronomist. In that part of the state the yields have been higher than ever, and reports just received from the university station near Ashland tell of wheat running 35 bushels to the acre. Over 30 bushels of peas to the acre are reported.

Clover Seed Fine.
Clover seed running from four to eight bushels to the acre is this season's remarkable showing, said Prof. Moore, and serves to emphasize the great opportunity for the farmer at a time when clover is worth $15 a bushel. Northern Wisconsin is a natural clover region.

Rain Help Yield.
Rain of the past week and more have brightened the crop situation greatly all over the state. An excellent crop is in sight and late potatoes have been helped exceedingly. A much better yield than had been anticipated is promised. Southern Wisconsin has been wonderfully revived by the plentiful moisture.

Alfalfa Prize Crop.
"Corn is growing by leaps and bounds," said Prof. Moore, "and alfalfa is the prize crop of all. There will be an extra cutting this year."
Thrashing on the university farm was finished last week. Results will be announced this week.

MIXED TONE TODAY ON STOCK MARKET

[BY UNITED PRESS.]
New York, N. Y., Aug. 21.—Trading started with a mixed tone, the expectation of a stronger market in response to the settlement of the British railway strike being disappointed. Weakness developed in Reading and Lehigh Valley. The entire list sold off fractionally.

CATTLE AND HOGS ARE HIGHER TODAY

Cattle Advance Ten Cents With Large Volume of Receipts—Hogs Also Rise Five and Ten Cents.
[BY UNITED PRESS.]

Chicago, Aug. 21.—Advances of from five to ten cents were noted today for all offerings of cattle and hogs. Receipts of cattle were good with the figure placed at 20,000, but increased prices were prevailing for all offerings. There was a fair volume of hog receipts although the total number was not up to expectations. The sheep market was weak today and the demand was slow. Quotations are as follows:

MARKET MOTIONLESS; VERY QUIET INDEED

Supplies Are Exceeding the Demands For Most Products, With Correspondingly Light Prices.

The market is easy, there is no general slump and prices are fairly well maintained. The stock is good and seems to stand the warm weather. There are many varieties and grades, but the well-known varieties are beginning to comprise the bulk of receipts with the result that the market is steadier than it has been.

The market is well supplied with plums, prices are not high and the demand is low.

SOIL PREPARATION TO PREVENT WASTE

It is Stated Nearly Nine Million Bushels of Wheat Were Thrown Away for Failure to Prepare for Drouth.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Colorado Springs, Aug. 21.—Farmers of the United States needlessly threw away 8,996,000 bushels of winter wheat this year, not to mention an enormous loss in other farm products, simply because they failed to prepare against drouth by taking steps to keep moisture in the soil. This is the declaration of Secretary John T. Burns of the International Dry-Farming Congress, who is now preparing to conduct the Sixth Congress, which meets in this city next October.

Mr. Burns has just read the report of the United States Department of Agriculture for August, showing that loss under the 1911 crop. Before him lay a sheet of wheat raised by J. M. Bradley of Peyton, Colo., who has just threshed an average of 20 bushels per acre from 100 acres, patcher in which ran as high as 57 bushels. On the Bradley land only four inches of moisture fell from the time this wheat was planted, September 2, to the day it was cut, July 15, and there is not a live stream within 25 miles. This land was summer tilled, that is, carefully cultivated and the weeds kept down the summer before it was planted. This is one of the tenets of scientific dry-farming as taught by the Congress. It is applicable to every part of the land, says Mr. Burns. The average of all wheat in the U. S. according to the government is only 14½ bushels, and the quality is 92 as against 62½ last year. So there is nothing wrong with the 1911 wheat but lack of moisture.

"Every farmer in the land could have done as Mr. Bradley did with his little four inches of rainfall, had he been intelligent enough to study dry-farming methods and willing to do the necessary work," declares Mr. Burns. "Some day they will prepare to meet drouth as they do all other adverse phenomena of nature, and overcome it, too."

Spanish War Veterans Meet.
Oklahoma City, Okla., Aug. 21.—Spanish-American War veterans from practically every State in the Union are attending the annual encampment of their national organization, which began its sessions here today. The Spanish American War Veterans are also in session. Elaborate entertainment has been provided for the veterans. John Lewis Smith, of Washington, D. C., is being honored for commander-in-chief of the veterans. Tampa, Fla., is an applicant for next year's encampment.

New Jersey Labor Congress.
Camden, N. J., Aug. 21.—The thirty-third annual congress of the New Jersey State Federation of Labor began its sessions in this city today with a good attendance of delegates. Numerous matters of importance to organized labor are scheduled for consideration during the three days' sessions.

NEW COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF SOUTHERN VETERANS.

Lieutenant-General C. Irvine Walker of Charleston, South Carolina. Savannah, Ga.—Lieutenant General C. Irvine Walker, of Charleston, S. C., commanding the Army of Northern Virginia Department, United Confederate Veterans, and next in rank to the late General George W. Gordon, of Tennessee, commander-in-chief of the veteran organization, has assumed command of the veterans pending the regular election of a successor to General Gordon, which will be held in Macon, Ga., next spring. The staff of the late commander-in-chief will be continued as the staff of General Walker.

General Walker is a native of Charleston, S. C. He graduated with first honors at the South Carolina Military Academy in April, 1861, just in time to take an active part in the great war. Previous to graduation he had been on duty as a cadet at the time when the first shot of the war was fired, when a detachment of cadets checked the attempted entrance into Charleston harbor of "The Star of the West." He enlisted formally in the service of his country on the day following his graduation, serving with honor and distinction until the close of the struggle.

Consider the Trees.
The trees are lovely in summer; so are the women. But how different are the women and the trees as to their clothes! To be sure, both are delightfully clothed; yet, with the abundant rainfall with which the trees are supplied, they require but one trunk to hold it all.—Smart Set.

SHIFT IN DIPLOMATIC CIRCLES.

Three important American diplomats who are likely to be affected, Upper left, David Jayne Hill, who recently has resigned as the representative of this country at Berlin; at upper right, John G. A. Leishman, ambassador to Italy who is to be shifted to the post at Germany left vacant by Mr. Hill's resignation. Below, Thomas J. O'Brien, one of the ablest of Uncle Sam's diplomats. He is now stationed at Tokio, but is to be advanced to the Italian post at Rome in respect to his own preference. It was at first suggested that he go to Berlin, but he was consulted and preferred the Italian post.

Mouse In Loaf of Bread.

A strange little incident occurred in a Perthshire (Scotland) town the other day. A housewife, when cutting bread for dinner, was astounded to find a mouse embedded in the heart of the loaf. It is conjectured that the rodent had somehow got among the dough after it had been set, and, not being observed thereafter, had passed on in the loaf to the oven.

Clung to Their Tin Cups.
In the middle ages drinking glasses and cups were rare and they were generally mounted upon a foot or stem of gold or silver, enriched with precious stones. Not until the fifteenth century, when Venice began to send her wares abroad, did the use of glasses become quite general, and even then, in ordinary life, the people clung to their "tin cups," which were often of beautiful design and workmanship.

Why, of Course!
"Why is the delivery boy always in such a rush?" asked the lady in the grocery. "So that if in his haste he delivers anything wrong, he will have time to right the matter," the grocer explained.—Buffalo Express.

He Was Sorry He Spoke.

It was at a suburban dinner party. The head of the house held up a rib of pork and observed, humorously: "Here, ladies, is what Eve was made of." "Yes," responded one of the guests, "and from about the same kind of a critter."—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

This Big Growing Business Wants You For An Active Partner

Our Ice Machine Testing Room.

How Fortunes Are Made

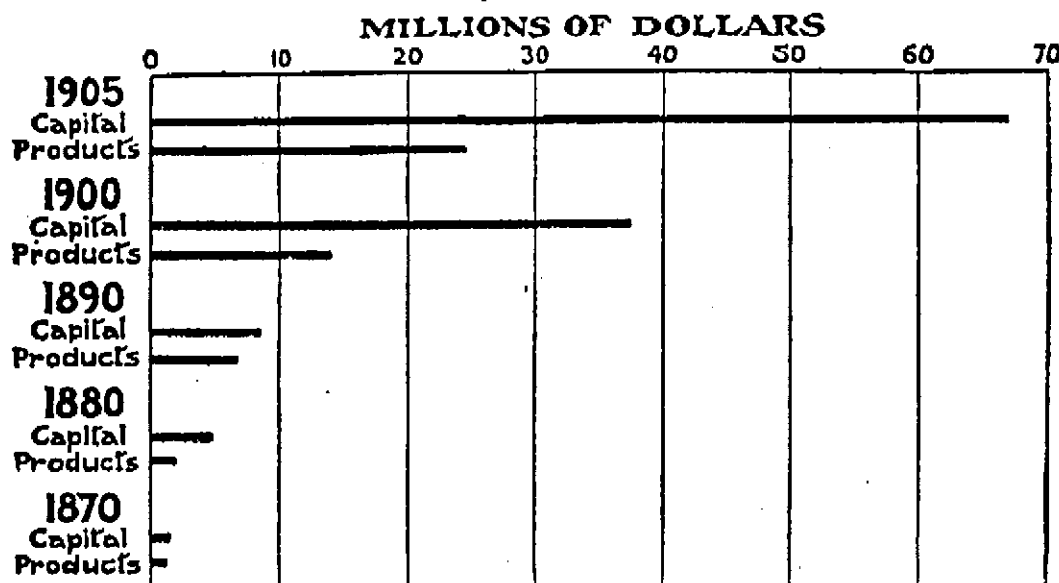

NOT long ago the American Bell Telephone stock went begging. Laborers erecting the necessary poles were paid in stock at $5.00 a share for want of the ready cash. Yet the telephone had proved its practicability and success. Its future growth was inevitable. Business had to have the Telephone.

The common stock of the Ivory Soap concern was once a drug on the market at $100 a share. Today it is worth $500 and the dividends amount to $20 a share. One hundred dollars thus invested ten years ago would produce $1280 annual income with all the extra dividends. The people had to have soap.

The Edison Electric Light Company's stock advanced in a single year from $100 to $4000 a share. The Welsbach Company stock once valued at $100 a share has paid $50,000 in dividends to date. Everyone had to use light.

Analyze these businesses for yourself. Seek out the points of value and you will see that it was the growing demand—the worth of the product—and the spreading need of it—that made such successes possible.

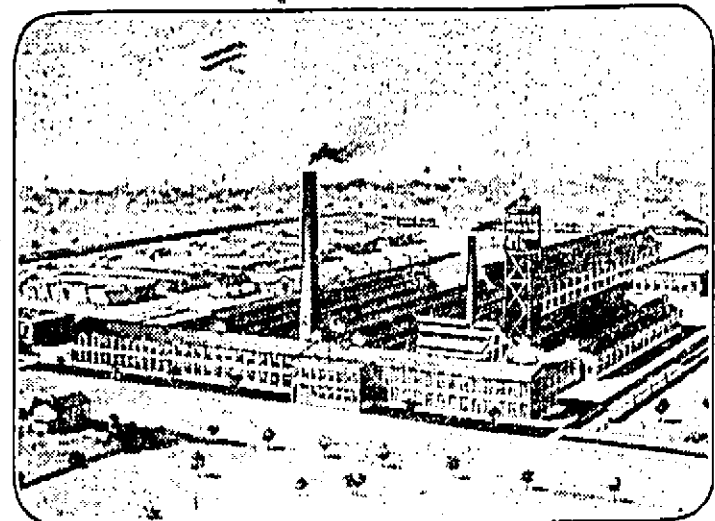

Analyze the values of the business of the United Refrigerator and Ice Machine Company, and you will see that the making of artificial ice—of cooling systems—for markets, hotels, restaurants, breweries, cold storage warehouses and hundreds of others is now an absolute necessity for the preservation of food and the serving of the necessities of life. Consider point by point the rapidly growing demand—the absolute need of refrigeration—and the worth of our product; compare the ultimate universal demand for the telephone, soap and light and you will find the same principles and forces embodied in our product in the same way.

THE making of artificial ice has increased with wonderful rapidity. The above chart prepared by the United States Government defines the past growth and clearly indicates the future of the business. It amounts to millions.

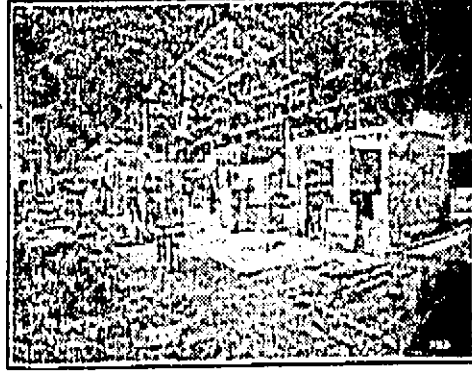

The manufacture of ice-making machinery must keep pace with the demand for more ice. Therein lies your opportunity to grasp now a money-making investment that will earn big dividends and double and treble the value of the stock you hold.

In addition to ice-making plants, we make refrigerating machinery (ice-less cooling system) and also refrigerators, coolers, store fixtures, counters, cases and meat blocks. Ours is the only concern in America that combines these lines.

Your Opportunity

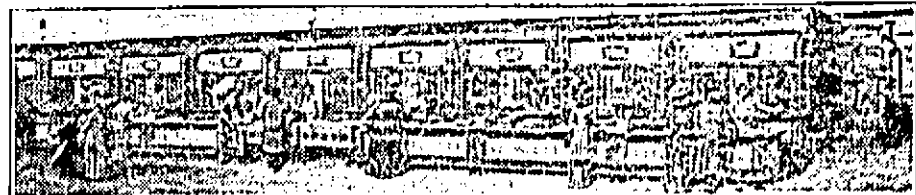

H ERE and now—right in your own state—near where you live—is this most unusual profit-sharing offer. On the basis of easy monthly payments you can become a proprietor—part owner of one of Wisconsin's biggest thriving industries.

Invest your money at home—in your state—where you can see the actual property—and know where your money goes. Remember, this plant was born in Wisconsin and has grown and thrived and prospered in Wisconsin.

The banks of the United States declare an average of 11% dividends—agricultural pursuits have given 9½%—railroads average 4½%—your savings bank gives you only 3%—returns to capital invested in manufacturing average 15.1%.

With increased capital, the United Refrigerator and Ice Machine Company will be able to multiply its present business of $100,000 a year many fold, and do it at a lower cost. This great saving will mean an increase in dividends.

It's a ground floor offer. The stock is sold at par—the money will be invested in extension of plant and equipment—to improve the property. Pin your check to the coupon and mail. Your stock will go to you by return mail. One Hundred Dollars, less 3% for cash, buys 10 shares. Or 210 will buy 10 shares—balance in 9 monthly payments. Act quickly! There are only a few thousand shares to be sold. If you want more facts, send information coupon. But do it today before offer is withdrawn.

GOOD SERMON GIVEN AT UNION SERVICE

MEETING OF THE CHURCHES HELD IN THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH LAST NIGHT.

REV. SHELDON SPOKE

The Subject of the Sermon Was the "Incredible Possibility," the Speaker Touched On A Year Vital Subject.

The Union service of the churches was held last night in the Congregational church. The sermon was given by Rev. Sheldon of Randall, Ia., and was from the Bible text, taken from the 26th verse of Matthew, "And as they did not, he said, Verily I say unto you, that one of you shall betray me. And they were exceedingly sorrowful and began everyone of them to say unto him, Lord, is it I?" The subject of Rev. Sheldon's discourse was the "Incredible Possibility."

"How many people in this world," said the speaker, "and a destiny on which they never counted! To be a superficial observer, this seems to be chance, but the deeper mind knows that this is not so, but that life is governed by inexorable laws. When we are young there are few problems which confront us, and all life seems easy and rosy. We are sure of ourselves, of life, of success. But the day comes when the sky is overcast and the windows of temptation threaten to sweep us away. Then we are not so sure of ourselves, and we question with the apostles, whether or not we may do something in the time of stress that we have never before dreamed of doing."

In the Acts of the Apostles there is described a shipwreck. The sailors weighed anchor when a south wind was blowing and the sea was calm. Most anyone could be a sailor in that kind of weather. But when the storm arose and the tempest came, how different it was! It called for courage and strength and manhood. And we know how the sailors fared; how they were wrecked and how some of them deserted in the heat. That is a good picture of life. So the winds blow when we are young; everything is easy, and rosy and the south winds blow when we are young. But the storms and trouble come, and we are liable to fall. For God does not want us to live without difficulties, but sends them to us for us to grow through them and become better and stronger."

Seventy years ago, there was born in Ohio, a boy with a temper; not much more temper than an ordinary boy has; but those who were with him could see it, and like all boys he was warned against letting his temper get the better of him; but he always said he could control his passions. He grew up and was married, and had children who in time were married too; one of his sons lived across the road from his father. One day, while his wife was away, the young man went to his father's home to stay, there arose a quarrel over a slight thing, and the son was ordered out of his father's house never to return. As he was crossing the road to his home, his father went to the shed, took his gun, and shot his son to death. And people said, how suddenly that came upon him. Oh, no. That started was back in his boyhood when he failed to control his temper and let it get the best of him.

But, you say, such a thing will never come upon you. You do not know when a combination of circumstances and provocations will force you to some such outbreak. This temper, this impatience, the devilish pride which affects so many of us, grows so gradually that we do not know it until it has us, grows so gradually that we do not know it until it has us in its grip. When the south wind is blowing we do not think these things possible. It is the incredible possibility that such a thing could ever happen to us. The history of every divorce in the country is the lack of self control on the part of someone usually of both parties. Do you think that anyone of the thousands of drunkards in this country ever expected to become so? It is the incredible possibility of these things happening to us. Habits are usually too weak to be felt, until they are too strong to be broken. No man ever fell suddenly, but it is the gradual growth of our passions, which accumulate until with the right circumstances down we go; and people say how suddenly it happened. But there is another incredible impossibility, one on the other side. That is that such things, through the effect of Jesus in our hearts, can be overcome and we can be made good and pure. Take the city which prepares for a drought we must store up the greatest possible amount of good things against the day of temptation, and prepare only for the average strain that may come upon us. We must grow into partnership with Jesus and fill our hearts with God's good things, and not merely have negative goodness. And when the south winds are blowing, we must be buying up our stores against the day of trial, which, incredible as it may seem, will come to us all.

SPRING VALLEY.

Spring Valley, Aug. 18.—Mr. and Mrs. Henry Merrill and daughters of Chicago, are visiting friends here. John Hader suffered a stroke of paralysis last week and his condition has been quite serious. Mrs. George Swanson, Sr., returned recently from a visit with relatives at Menom, S. Dakota. Mrs. Roy Greenwald is quite poorly.

Mrs. George Annew of Broadhead, spent Wednesday here with friends. Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Fraser and children spent Sunday with relatives at Magnolia.

Mrs. Florence Lewis of Evansville, will teach at the Scotch school the coming year.

Mrs. F. Van Stille, who has been quite ill is better.

Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Brewer and daughter came out from Janesville Friday for a visit with relatives. Mr. Brewer returned Saturday, leaving Mrs. Brewer and daughter for a longer stay.

Hon. and Mrs. Burr Sprague spent Friday at Albert Palmer's.

FUNERAL SERVICES HELD ON SATURDAY

Last Tribute Paid To Evanville Lad Who Was Fatally Injured By Cars.—Evanville Personal.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Evansville, Aug. 21.—The funeral of little Ben Ellis whose sudden and untimely taking away has caused such universal sorrow in this community, was held Saturday afternoon at half past three from the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Ellis on Maple Avenue. The house was filled with sorrowing friends who sought by their presence and sympathy to lend a ray of comfort to the grief stricken relatives.

Rev. Chas. E. Coon conducted the service and Clifford Pearson sang "One Sweetly Solemn Thought" and "Told Them My Hand." The little casket was covered with a profusion of flowers. The child was born in Evansville, Feb. 14, 1904, and all his life has been spent here. He was a general favorite with everyone and was bright beyond his years and having an unusually sunny disposition many will remember his bright face and attractive ways.

The bearers were Leon Patterson, Leonard Finn, Earl Phillips, Leslie Fisher, Charley Hyne and Calvert Cain. The remains were tenderly laid at rest in Maple Hill cemetery.

Entertained At Brooklyn. About twenty Evansville young ladies went to Brooklyn Saturday afternoon, where they were royally entertained by Mrs. Delbert Smith and Miss Mahle Ames. The party was given at the pleasant farm home of Mrs. Smith and was in the nature of a "field meet." The public of the afternoon consisted of athletic events such as foot races, shot put, endurance races, broad jump, centipede race, hammer throw, hobble race and tug of war. Some high scores were made by the young ladies, but the honors of the afternoon were equally divided between Mrs. F. E. Jones and Miss Hazel Hankinson.

Supper was had at five o'clock and was served in true cafeteria style, the menu being made up of the vlad most reliable after a jolly afternoon on the "field." The guests included the Misses Margaret Walker, Media Stevens, Mae Holmes, Josephine Crow, Lela Van Patton, Rosalee Spencer, Maude Pessenden, Helen Richardson, Mae Phillips, Pearl Campbell, Maude Gilles, Jennie Crow, Hazel Hankinson, Iva Sherman, Lily Lees, Ethel Frost, Mrs. Paul Ehringer and Mrs. F. E. Jones.

Personal Mention. Mrs. B. H. Standish and daughter, Mrs. A. H. Finckler arrived Saturday evening from Madison. They report Mr. Standish, who has been in the hospital there for the past three weeks as improving gradually, but it will probably be two or three weeks before he will be able to come home. Mrs. Standish returned to Madison yesterday, but Mrs. Finckler will leave some time this week for her new home in Whitewater, Canada.

About twenty ladies were guests of Mrs. J. W. Ames at a five hundred party Friday afternoon. Miss Florence Harrington and Mr. M. E. Diemer of Madison, were over Sunday guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Barnard. Mr. and Mrs. Barnard and their guests enjoyed an auto ride to Janesville Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. Ellis of Huntley, Ill., was called here by the death of her little grand son Ben Ellis.

Mrs. Louie Spencer and daughter, Miss Alice spent the week end in Milwaukee.

Mrs. Alice and daughter, Miss Belle of Magnolia, spent Saturday at the home of Mrs. Maria Leede.

NOTES FOR CITY FARMERS ONLY.

(By H. L. RANN.)

When a hen gets the idea that she is a heart-breaker and puts in most of her time fussing over her personal appearance, she has no edge on the barren old hen in point of productiveness. Some hens are like some women—they would rather stand around and preen and plume than lean up against a day's work. A giddy-minded pullet is a source of discussion in the henery, and the sooner her giblets adorn the home circle the better.

The man who insists on smoking in the kitchen during meal time is a bigger nuisance than a swivel-tongued barber.

After the tines of home-cured tobacco from a cob pipe with teeth like a milk trap have penetrated the pores of a new dress, that delicate white will prove about as appealing as a chilled side pork served as a hot weather dessert.

Boiled cabbage is the only article of food which can look a cob pipe in the face without giving way at the knee joints. If your husband indulges in this inhuman practice, make him change his base, if you have to puncture him with a stove iron.

The hired girl who insists upon reading Tolstol or Bernard Shaw while she is preparing the mid-day meal is too dangerous a proposition to be trifled with. A neighbor of ours had an intellectual maid who tried to digest "St. Elmo" with one hand while making cream of barley soup with the other, and in her absorption she thoughtlessly stirred in several tablespoonsful of Epsom salts and paralyzed the appetite of every guest at the table. Another girl of our acquaintance deposited a Children's Home tract in the omelette, and when the head of the house ran a new set of teeth through it he cancelled his subscription to the U. B. church and kicked several yawning apertures in the girl's trunk. The love of high-class literature is all right when it doesn't interfere with the more serious duties of life.

LAWS ON STRENGTH OF STATE BRIDGES

Heavy Traction Engines Cause Damage On Bridges and Culverts.—State Laws Governing Matter.

With the beginning of the threshing season, news items recounting the details of accidents caused by weak bridges and heavy engines begin to appear.

The size of traction engines used in threshing has been steadily increasing, and with this increase in the size of engines has come an increased number of accidents due to weak bridges. The legislature of 1911 recognizing this, has enacted several laws designed to make the strength of bridges built in the future ample to take care of any increase in the loads they may be called upon to carry.

Size of Loads. One of these (Chapter 642, Laws of 1911) provides that all iron, steel or concrete bridges with spans of more than four feet built or repaired in the state shall be designed to carry, without planking, all loads up to fifteen tons. All iron, steel or concrete culverts of four feet span or less, must be made safe for all loads to eighteen tons.

State Aid Law. The state aid law (Chapter 337, Laws of 1911) also contains provisions designed to improve the grade, or bridge work. This law provides that the state shall contribute toward the cost of bridges built on state aid roads, in order to obtain state aid, these bridges must be designed by the State Highway Commissioner. This law also requires that the plans of all bridges built under county aid shall be approved by the Commissioner.

County Aid. Another enactment (the amendment of Sec. 1319 of the Statutes) puts the cost of bridges entitled to receive county aid at such a low figure ($200 in towns valued at $100,000 or more, and one-twentieth of one per cent in towns valued at less than $100,000) that practically all bridges built in the future will be entitled to receive this aid.

Commission Can Inspect. By these enactments the Legislature has imposed upon the Commissioner the duty of inspecting the plans of practically every bridge built in the state. With this supervision, the grade of bridges built must improve. With a definite standard of strength ample for all loads, fixed by law, the Commissioner will be in a position to demand good work. The old wooden bridges, which cause most of the accidents, are rapidly becoming a thing of the past. Replaced with structures of the strength demanded by the law, it should be only a few years until bridge accidents, now so frequent, will be entirely unknown.

CREATORE, RESENTS SCURRILOUS EPIETHETS

Italian Bandmaster Who Has Entertained Janesville Audience in Street Fight in Milwaukee.

Innocent at being called a "foreigner" by James Malley, a Milwaukee insurance man, Creatore, the famous Italian bandmaster, resorted to battle combat in a strenuous endeavor to assert his rights. Malley claimed that the famous musician jabbed his elbows into his ribs in a most forcible manner. He resented this treatment with further abusive language it is alleged, and both were finally taken into court where they were released on bail. Malley was sent away first to prevent further pugilistic demonstration on the part of the late Creatore.

Spirit of Sympathy.

Beware of that banis of social life, evil speaking. Seek for the spirit of love which is the spirit of truth—for you can never know anyone without sympathy or love—and take care not to speak of those who have not yet learned to love. Never talk of other's faults without necessity and avoid those who do.—Hoskin.

Luxury.

I know it is more agreeable to walk upon carpets than to lie upon dunce floors; I know it is pleasant to have all the comforts and luxuries of civilization, but he who cares only for these things is worth no more than a butterfly, contented and thoughtless upon a morning flower; and who ever thought of rearing a tombstone to a last summer's butterfly?—Henry Ward Beecher.

REQUEST NOT TO SPEED ON MOTORCYCLE RACE TRACK

Automobile Drivers Seriously Damage the Course When They Run Machines at High Speed.

Manager Harry McDonald of the motorcycle race to be held here on August 26, and the directors of the Janesville Park Association, have requested automobile drivers using the race course at the fair grounds not to use the same for speeding as it will seriously damage the track for the races. The track is being placed in condition for the motorcycle races and auto speeders serve to tear up the earth and render the course rough and dangerous.

The J. P. Cullen Company of this city have been awarded the contract to duplicate the factory building which they have just finished for the Van Brunt Manufacturing Company of Horicon, Wis. The new building which has just been erected is 130 feet long and 125 feet wide and four stories high. The contract price was $25,000. The structure was put up in the record time of 56, while the time allowed in the contract was 70 days. The new building to be erected will be the exact duplicate of the one just finished.

Neglected Abbottsford.

The mansion-house of Abbottsford, world-famous as the home of Sir Walter Scott, is in want of a tenant. The famous library and collection of antiquities are held in trust by the dean of the faculty of advocates, Edinburgh, on condition that the heirs of the builder of Abbottsford find accommodations for them in five out of the 40 rooms in the house.

More Trouble.

"My husband had an awful time collecting that debt," Mrs. Lapelling was saying. "I don't pretend to understand law terms, but I heard him say that before he could get the money he had to Barney Shea (the man's wages.)"

The Cost of Purity exceeds all other Costs in Schlitz Brewing

We spend more on purity—more time, more skill and more money than on any other cost in our brewing.

We sterilize every tub, vat, tank—we scald every barrel—every pipe and pump—every time we use it.

We wash every bottle four times by machinery.

The air in which the beer is cooled is filtered.

Every bottle of Schlitz is sterilized, after it is sealed, by a process invented by Pasteur.

Light starts decay even in pure beer. Dark glass gives protection against light.

The brown bottle protects Schlitz purity from the brewery to your glass.

If you knew what we know about beer, you would say, "Schlitz—Schlitz in Brown Bottles."

See that crown or cork is branded "Schlitz."

Holds Grain Producing Records

The Red River Valley Still Leads

The Red River Valley has been known for years as the great wheat producing area of the world, and the wheat fields have paid to the farmers millions of dollars in the past. The soil is still able to produce this cereal, and there is no doubt, but that the returns from the wheat fields will amount this year to a sum larger than has ever been received from the same source any year in the past.

All small grain is raised here, also with success, and native and tame grasses grow in luxuriance.

The Red River Valley also produces fine corn. In fact the corn raised in Polk County, Minnesota cannot be excelled in any section of the Northwest.

Vegetables and fruits are also grown in great abundance

DOINGS OF THE VAN LOONS—Yes. It is kind of tough, but it was Father that did the inviting.

CHATTANOOGA

A FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY WAR STORY
BY F. A. MITCHELL.

"You're just the man we want. You've got plenty of bone and muscle. I should reckon you'd been in the ranks afore this."

"Waal, I don't want ter fight outen my state 'f I can help it."

"What aint?"

"Tennessee."

"I reckon you'll have a chance to fight in it if you join the army."

"Reckon so?"

"Yas; I'm recruited for Chatham's division. Thar all Tennessee regiments in our division except the artillery 'n a regiment o' Georgia and one o' Texas infantry."

"What is yer division?"

"Across the river. At Dallas or Poe's; somethin' up thar. Y' better let me put yer down for my regiment, tho'—th Tennessee."

"I mought hev to go way down south."

"No fear o' that jest now."

"What makes y' calculate on 't?"

"There's two divisions across now—cum and Wilhurs. Y' don't reckon their goen ter cross the river for the purpose o' marchin south, do y'?"

"Oh, I don't know nothin about military."

"Waal, will you join us?"

"Ef y' reckon all the soldiers here is goen to fight in old Tennessee I reckon I will. The abolition army hez overrun our state, 'n I want ter see 'em driv out."

"The way to do it, my good man, is to take a musket and help."

"Do y' reckon th't's what we're goen for do?"

"I tell you that two divisions are already across, and I happen to know that all the transportation in the shape of cars and locomotives that can be found are being corraled hyar for a further movement. Come, now, my man, stop talkin and take yer place whar y' oughter be. What's yer name?"

The officer took up a pen.

"All right, cap, count me in. I'll jest go 'n git my bundle and be back hyar in half an hour."

The captain hesitated. Mark began to fear that he was thinking of using force rather than let so promising a recruit go.

"Are you sure you'll come back?"

"Harten, cap."

Mark moved away, and it was not until he had got out of sight that he realized he had run a great risk, for he saw that the captain would have detained him had he not believed in his sincerity about enlisting.

Mark went straight to the hotel and paid his bill. He feared the recruiting officer might send for him or have him followed, so without waiting to eat his supper he made a package of his purchases. Jakey took his gun and slung his powder and shot down over his shoulder. Then the two left the hotel to begin an attempt to leave Chattanooga. Their stay had been only from sunrise to sunset, but Mark had gained all the information he was likely to acquire and was anxious to get away with it. True, he did not know where the enemy would strike, but this he would not be likely to learn.

Going down to the ferryboat they found a boat which had all it could do to carry the soldiers and citizens who were crossing. Mark thought he would try what assurance would do in getting across without a pass. He found the guard more watchful than he expected.

"Can't y' pass me 'n my lecter brother, Heintman?" he asked. "We've been down some trادين in Chattanooga and want ter git home. We've been buyin some caliker for the women folks."

"Old Bragg himself couldn't go over without a pass," responded the officer. "What mought I git one?" asked Mark.

"At headquarters, I reckon."

Mark turned away. He considered the expediency of going to headquarters and asking for a pass, but regarded this course fraught with too much risk. He determined to make an attempt to get out of town and across the river by the route over which he had entered. He knew the ground by this route, and that was a great advantage. If he could steal his way beyond the picket he could doubtless find a method of crossing. Perhaps he might make his way down the river and across to Shell mound, or, still better, to the mouth of Battle creek, held by the Union forces.

Mark skirted the town on the west, and then took a course directly south till he came to the railroad. This he followed to a point near where he had blundered the night before. Crawling to a rise in the ground and motioning Jakey to keep back, he hid down on his stomach to make a survey.

It was nearly dark. Silhouettes of figures were passing between him and a campfire beside the railroad track. Beyond, the palisades of Lookout mountain stood out boldly against a streak of twilight in the west. Between the track and the river was an open space, over which he must pass to get by the picket. The river bank would afford some protection. Near where he was it was steep, and the current set directly against it, but lower down by the picket there appeared to be places where a man could walk under the low bluff.

The moon was about three-quarters full, and the night was clear except for clouds that would float lazily over Lookout mountain and across the moon's face, so that at times her light was partly obscured.

Calling Jakey, he gave him an account of what he intended to try, and told him that if it should be necessary to run under fire the boy was to lie down, and, if advisable, give himself up, but on no account to risk being shot. Jakey only half promised, and Mark was obliged to be satisfied with this. Then, waiting for a cloud to obscure the moon, he led the way to the river bank, which he proposed to skirt. He left his bundle, but took Jakey's gun, loaded and capped, in his hand. They soon gained the point where they had landed the night before—nearly opposite where Mark had seen the silhouettes on the railroad. Treating as noiselessly as possible, they passed along the river margin under the overhanging bank until they came to a place where the bank was low. Stooping, they proceeded for a short distance till they reached the root of a tree that had been felled long before. Here they paused and listened.

Suddenly they heard what sounded like a musket brought from the shoulder down to the hollow of a hand, and a voice:

"Who comes thar?"

"Corporal of the guard, with relief."

"Advance, corporal, and give the countersign."

Then there was some muttering and footsteps tramping away.

Mark peeped between the roots of the stump toward the point from which the sounds had come. He saw, not a hundred feet away, a man sitting on a log with his musket resting against his shoulder, the butt on the ground. He was looking listlessly up at the sky. Presently he took a clay pipe out of his pocket, which he filled, and touching a match lighted it.

"He's the river picket," said Mark to himself.

The sentinel sat smoking while Mark meditated. His first thought was, Why did I bring this boy? The situation was perilous enough without an embarrassment. The guard was facing the space over which they would have to pass to escape; there might be a slight chance for him to make a dash were he alone, but with the boy it was not to be thought of, and Mark was unwilling to leave him. He looked back with a view to retracing the route over which he had come. He was horrified to see a sentinel pacing a hundred yards above. He had been placed there by the relief.

The only hope was to wait for the man nearest him to relax his watchfulness, and attempt to pass him. The sentinel up the river was hot to be feared except by going back, for from the nature of the ground the fugitives would be hidden from him if they should go forward.

Mark resolved to wait and watch. The minutes seemed hours, the hours days. The soldier still sat on the log, though now and then he would get up, and leaning his musket leaning on it saunter back and forth on his beat. He well knew there was no enemy to fear; his duty was little more than a form.

No began to hum a few strains of "The Swanee River."

"Poor devil," said Mark to himself, "he, too, is thinking of home. What a cursed thing war is! If ever I got out of this I'll do no more such duty. Give me an enemy face to face, bullets before me and no gibbet behind me."

But he had said this many a time before.

"My good man," talking to the soldier, but without making any sound, "if you will go far enough from that musket you'll never get back to your Swanee river."

"Nonsense," Mark, the sentinel seemed to say to him; "a shot would arouse the whole picket post. Besides, if that's your game, why don't you ridle me with Jakey's shotgun?"

Then the stillness was broken by the sound of oars out on the river. How Mark longed for the boat to come and take him from his terrible position! But whoever was working those oars pulled on, unmindful of the man who so keenly envied the oarsman's freedom. The sounds became fainter and fainter till Mark could hear them no more. He sighed as if he had lost a dear friend.

"Jakey's comfortable, anyway," he said, looking down at the boy. He had dropped asleep, and Mark for the first time in his life envied a human being the protection of weakness. There was innocent childhood, unconscious of danger, sleeping sweetly, the boy's face lighted by the moon.

At last Mark heard the relief coming. The sentinel took his gun and began to pace his beat. The usual form was proceeded with, and the relief marched to the sentinel up the river. Mark observed the man that had been left on post.

"I hope this fellow will be more inclined to rest," he mused.

But he was disappointed to see the man begin to pace his beat energetically. He seemed to fear that if he did not keep moving he would get drowsy. A half hour passed with scarcely a rest, then another half hour. It was tramp, tramp in one direction, turn and tramp, tramp back again.

The clouds which continued to pass over the moon became heavier. If the sentinel would only relax his vigilance, these periods of comparative darkness would be favorable to flight. But if the soldier was to keep a proper watch the clouds might do away. Then there was the morning to come. Mark began to lose that coolness which thus far had characterized him. It was the waiting that was wearing him out.

In perhaps an hour after the sentinel came on picket he yawned. This was the first sign of hope for Mark. After awhile he sat down on the log and yawned several times at intervals. He got up and paced for awhile, but at last sat down again. This time he sat longer and his chin sank on his breast. He roused himself and sank away again. He would not go to sleep comfortably in accordance with Mark's muttered prayer, but took short naps. Mark considered the feasibility of an attempt to escape between these naps. Without Jakey he could do it; with Jakey it was too hazardous.

At last the soldier slid down on to the ground, stretched out his legs and rested his back against the log.

Mark's heart went up into his throat with a sudden joy.

As near as he could guess there remained a quarter of an hour till the next relief would come. He looked at the moon, which was now shining with provoking brightness; he looked at the man and tried to make sure that he was asleep. It was impossible to tell with any certainty.

"I'll risk it," he said.

He took Jakey up in his arms very carefully, hoping not to waken him, fixing the boy's limp body in the hollow of his left arm. In the right hand he took the squirrel gun, cocked and capped, using the arm at the same time to hold the child. When all was ready he rose slowly and fixed his eyes on the soldier.

The man did not stir.

Mark moved slowly forward, his eyes riveted on the sentinel. A few steps convinced him that the man really slept. Mark turned his back on him and walked a dozen steps noiselessly, picking a place to plant his foot at each step.

Halt!

Was it the soldier's voice? Should he turn and shoot him? He had

No, only an explosion of a burning brand in the campfire at the picket point on the railroad track.

He turned to look at the sentinel. The man sat there gazing straight at him; at least so he appeared to Mark. The figure was as pale as day in the moonlight, though too far for Mark to see the eyes. He cast a quick glance down into Jakey's face. He, too, was sleeping peacefully. While these two were in slumberland Mark felt himself suspended between heaven and hell. And how still it was. From the hum of insects would have been a relief.

All this occupied but a moment. Mark turned his back again and moved cautiously forward. Suddenly he trod on a rotten branch. It cracked with a sound which seemed to him like the report of a pistol.

Again he paused and turned. He saw the sentinel motionless. He had slipped farther down, and his hat had fallen farther over his forehead.

Think God!

He moved backward, his eyes fixed on his sleeping enemy, occasionally turning to see where he stopped. He was getting near to cover. In this way he passed to within a few steps of concealment. How he coveted the overhanging bank near to him, yet far enough to be useless should the sentinel awake too soon!

Catch!

This sound was real; it was a sneeze from the picket.

Mark knew that it was a signal of awakening. He darted behind the bank and was out of sight.

He heard the sentinel get up, shake himself, give a yawn, a grunt, as if chilled, and begin to pace his beat.

Mark moved away cautiously, a great flood of joy and thankfulness welling up through his whole nature. After going a sufficient distance to be out of hearing, he awakened Jakey.

"Jakey! Wake up!"

The boy opened his eyes.

"We've beyond the picket."

"What's my gun?"

"Oh, blessed childhood," thought Mark, "that in moments of peril can be interested in such trifling things!"

"I have your gun here in my hand. It's safe. Stand on your legs, my boy. We're going on."

Jakey stood on the ground and rubbed his eyes with his fists. Once awake he was awake all over.

They moved on down the river toward the base of Lookout mountain, soon leaving the river margin and striking inland behind some rising ground. Finding a convenient nook in a clump of bushes wherein to leave Jakey, Mark told him to lie down and stay there while he reconnoitered to find a way to get down the river and to cross it.

Mark hunted nearly all night. He could find no practicable route. He did not know how to proceed around Lookout mountain, and could find no means of crossing the Tennessee near where he was. At last, looking down from a knoll, he could see the margin of the river at a place where the bank concealed the shore between the base of the bank and the verge of the water. But what he saw especially, and which gladdened his heart, was a boat moored to the shore and in it a pair of oars.

A New Lord & Thomas Book

Clever Maneuvers—Strategy in Advertising

We have now to announce the most valuable book that we ever have issued on advertising.

It compiles the digest of countless experiences in a thousand separate lines.

It cites many examples of what has been done—of what can always be done—by clever and tested maneuvers.

It tells how to do quickly, cheaply and safely what used to involve time, money and risk.

It reveals, for the first time, the new science of Strategy, to which all of our latest successes are due.

There was never a book more interesting, more helpful, to a man who has things to sell.

Our first great book was on "Reason-Why" copy. All good salesmanship-print has ever since been based on it.

Our next was on men—the value and rarity of real genius in selling. On the need for combining ideas. Since then there has been a crying demand—an over-demand—for men of the requisite caliber. And such men are earning, on the average, twice what they received before.

Our next was "Safe Advertising." It told how to conduct, in any line, riskless experiments. How to let the thousands decide what the millions will buy. It told how to reconnoiter—how to skirmish before attack. That book has saved advertisers, in all probability, many millions of dollars.

Now comes the ripe fruit of forty years of experience, in a thousand separate lines.

Now comes a new science—the science of Strategy—worked out into rules of procedure.

Now come new ways for getting distribution, for securing quick returns, for rapidly building trade. For doing all these things at a trifling risk, and often without investment.

It sounds almost impossible, and it was impossible up to a few years ago. But it since has been done—done a hundred times over. And this book, for the first time, tells how it was done.

Any man with a selling problem is welcome to this book. And every such man should have it.

It will bring to him the digested experience of men who have traveled every road to success.

It marshals known facts, and works out their deductions. And every deduction has a wide application. The ablest men will get the greatest benefit.

You will wonder, perhaps, how we came to reveal these hard-earned secrets, these proved-out plans. Our answer is this: Our object is mainly to wake men up to this Agency's efficiency. To convey to all a new conception of our powers and prowess.

Cut out this reminder; put it in your pocket. Then, when convenient, write us for the book.
